

Who is Astoundry

Astoundry is a full service information technology consulting company. Astoundry does something no other I.T. consulting firm seems capable of doing - we deliver projects that are on time, on target, and on budget. Our people understand business. They have been in your shoes before and bring years of industry experience to their projects. We blend local consulting services, assessment, and project management with custom software development. This hybrid model enables your I.T. team to have local and experienced project managers supported by a team of world-class software developers. We deliver the team, the talent, and the consistent quality of service to ensure our clients have the ability to meet their goals every time.

I.T. as it should be.

What does “I.T. as it should be” mean?

It means we will help you reach your technology goals without the typical pain involved in I.T. projects, such as exorbitant and unchecked costs, delays and disruptions to your business.

It means that our unique delivery model, employee talent and passion for client service will exceed your expectations.

It means we can attract the best talent in the industry by providing employees with the best possible work environment.

It means we will strive to develop mutually rewarding partnerships with employees, partners, clients and vendors.

It means that our employees love what they do and are passionate about you and your company.

It means that we will serve you as we would serve ourselves and that we will deliver projects on time, on target and on budget.

It means Astoundry truly delivers I.T. as it should be.
